INTEL X86 MICROPROCESSOR CASES

J.C.C.P. No. 4443

1 Fry's Electronics, Inc. ("Fry's") is a third party to this action and was served with a document
2 production subpoena on October 4, 2005, from Plaintiff Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. and AMD
3 International Sales and Service, Ltd. (hereinafter "Plaintiffs"). Pursuant to the Court's invitation, Fry's
4 hereby submits the following comments and objections to the [Proposed] Protective Order.

5 1. Fry's objects to paragraph 1 of the Terms and Conditions of Protective Order
6 section. More specifically, Fry's objects to the last sentence of this paragraph which currently states:

7 Confidential Discovery Material that loses that designation, either by agreement of the 8 Parties or the challenge process set out in paragraph 16, may be used for any purpose, 9 unless such use is restricted by agreement or by the Court.

10 Fry's Objects to this provision because it would allow the Parties to agree to treat information
11 designated "Confidential" by Third Parties as non-confidential. In other words, it would allow the Parties
12 to circumvent a Third Parties' "Confidential" designation by mere agreement of the parties. It is Fry's 13 position that information designated as "Confidential" by Third Parties should remain Confidential unless 14 the Third Party producing the document agrees otherwise or unless the Court, after giving the Third Party
15 an appropriate opportunity to be heard on the issue, orders that the information is to be treated in a manner
16 other than Confidential.

17 Fry's further objects to the phrase "... may be used for any purpose, unless such use is restricted 18 by agreement or by the Court." Fry's requests that this phrase be changed to "... may be used for any 19 purpose, unless such use is restricted by agreement, by law, or by the Court." (emphasis added to denote 20 addition).

21 2. Fry's Objects to Paragraph 6 subsection (c) and paragraph 9. Plaintiffs have subpoenaed 22 highly confidential sales documents such as industry-wide purchase agreements and sales information.
23 Said information could greatly harm Fry's, and other Third Parties, ability to negotiate competitive
24 purchase orders and vendor agreements should it be disclosed to the Parties to the lawsuit. Fry's therefore 25 requests that a second "tier" be added to the protective order that would shield such highly confidential
26 information from disclosure to the Parties' and their In-House Counsel.

1 In the alternative, should the Court refuse Fry's request for a two-tiered protective order, Fry's
2 requests that In-House Counsel should be precluded from viewing confidential documents in their normal
3 place of business and that they only be granted access to view the documents at their outside counsel's 4 offices. Paragraph 9 provides that:

5 . . . In no event shall Confidential Discovery Material be stored in at any business premises
6 of the Receiving Party, or be made accessible electronically to employees of the Receiving 7 Party, except that In-House Counsel may view, but not store, Confidential Discovery
8 Material at his or her normal workplace by electronically and remotely accessing a Receiving Party's electronic document repository . . .

9 Making the Confidential documents available electronically for inspection by In-House Counsel at 10 their "normal workplace," is essentially equivalent to storing the documents at the offices of In-11 House Counsel. There is simply no need for such ready access to confidential documents by In-12 House Counsel and the risk of abuse and exposure to other Party employees is too great. Indeed, 13 there is nothing that would prohibit the In-House Counsel from printing the documents or storing 14 them in a manner that could be viewed by others within the Parties' employment.

15 Finally, to the extent that this Court allows In-House Counsel to view Confidential
16 documents produced by Third Parties, Fry's requests that the In-House Counsel's identity be 17 disclosed to the Third Parties. Therefore, paragraph 6(c) should be changed from: "Two In-House 18 Counsel identified to the opposing party" to, "Two In-House Counsel Identified to the opposing 19 Party and any Producing Party."

20 3. Last, Fry's requests that the Third Parties be given access to the "Acknowledgements of 21 Protective Order." This is necessary to ensure that the Third Parties know who has been given access to 22 the "Confidential" documents that they produced. The Third Parties clearly have a right to know who has 23 been given access to their "Confidential" information. For example, if an expert in this case should also 24 be involved in another matter involving a Third Party (or later become involved a matter involving the 25 Third Party) and he or she has been given access to "Confidential" information from that Third Party, the 26 Third Party clearly has an interest knowing about said access. Accordingly, Fry's requests that the last 27 sentence in Paragraph 7 be changed from: "The Acknowledgements will not be exchanged, but will be

1 maintained and made available to the Court upon the Court's request" to "The Acknowledgements of 2 Protective Order shall be timely produced to the Producing Part and will be maintained and made
3 available to the Court upon the Court's request."

4 Respectfully submitted,
